

HARMONY CANDIDATE NOT A POSSIBILITY

TAFT AND ROOSEVELT LEADERS DO NOT BELIEVE PLAN FEASIBLE.

POLITICAL NEWS TODAY

Shows That There is Not Much Hope Of Any Adjustment of the Present Tangle.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Chicago, June 13.—Many delegates to the republican national convention who arrived today talked of the advisability of a dark horse candidate for President in the hope of bringing about party harmony and success.

The leaders while admitting that such a proposition may be brought forward at the eleventh hour apparently feel that line between the Taft and Roosevelt forces have been so sharply drawn and such high feeling aroused that there is little hope now of a compromise.

Taft supporters apparently have more confidence of success than ever, after the victory in the contests before the national committee yesterday and reiterated their predictions of the renomination of the President.

TEACHER MUST HAVE ABILITY AS FARMER

Rural Teacher of Future, Says Dr. Chas. McCarthy, Will Get Part of Support From School Farm.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., June 13.—The most efficient rural school of the future will be surrounded by a small farm of from ten to fifteen acres, with a school teacher who will partly support himself upon this land. This is the opinion of Dr. Charles McCarthy, legislative librarian, who is in charge of the investigation of the rural schools of Wisconsin now being conducted by the public affairs board.

"In Germany the rural school teacher generally lives in the school house," said Dr. McCarthy in explaining his views. "That feature may not be adopted here, but after we have consolidated to the proper extent there is no reason why we could not have ten, twelve or fifteen acres of land around the school and have the rural teacher partly support himself on this land; he could have his house on it, bought by the community so that the land could be used also in agricultural education. It would be to the advantage of the teacher to have hot beds, cold frames, gasoline engines, milk testers and some cattle some of which could be furnished by the school. This may not be practical in a good many rural schools, but can be present in rural high schools such as those in Minnesota and especially those in California.

"If we could then provide a minimum salary for agricultural teachers, provide state inspection of them before any state aid is given either to local rural schools or to rural high schools, we would have the beginning of a true rural educational system. However, unless there is some land and actual machinery connected with the rural consolidated school, there will be a large tendency to have merely book knowledge.

"Of course, the boy who has been working on the farm is in a different position from the boy in the city, in that the lessons that he learns in the school can be applied to their own. But if he learns them merely out of books they will not be learned in the same way. He needs to see things as they are and to come into actual contact with the illustrations which the teacher gives from the books.

"I am one of those who believe that the application of the book to agriculture will do much good. We must adopt truly the principle of 'learning by doing'."

Fifty marines will proceed to Mayari to the relief of the blue jackets landed by the gunboat Nashville, for the protection of the Woodford mines.

Not Approved. Havana, Cuba, June 13.—Secretary of the Interior Iru informed the Associated Press that the proposition to send Major General Leonard Wood or Brigadier General Knicker to Cuba on a mission to Cuba, would be rejected with disfavor by the government. It came with the authority to arrange terms of peace between the government and the insurgents.

The Cuban government fears that if a mission from the United States were to have authority to arrange a settlement it might involve recognition of some of the demands of the negroes.

The only concession that the Cuban government is willing to make is the allowance of a few days' grace to the rebels in which to surrender.

REBELS REPORTED LOSING ADHERENTS

Treatment of Inhabitants of Loyal Territory is Causing Them Heavy Losses.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

At General Huerta's Headquarters, Rosillo, Mex., June 13.—Indignation at the devastation of the rebels on their northward retreat by the residents in this district has become bitter against the revolutionists and in consequence General Huerta could have thousands of recruits for the asking.

This section has been stripped of provisions and horses which the farmers had provided themselves with under difficult circumstances. At Comanche two stations north on the Mexican Central railway the rebels took three tons of high grade silver ore, valued at $30,000, and three tons of medium grade silver metal, the silver being owned by the Santa Fe Mining company, and the rebels are reported to have gone to Chihuahua and Juarez and converted their plunder into coin.

That the Mexican people are tired of the revolution was indicated today by the arrival of refugees from the state of Durango, making overtures to General Huerta for peace. They ask only a guarantee of safety in case of surrender. General Huerta has granted the guarantees to all who will surrender unconditionally.

Homer A. Scott, an El Paso resident, arrived here yesterday after a thrilling dash through the rebellious district to the federal camp. Scott had been isolated for six weeks with the rebel columns under General Tampico and General Aguirre in the vicinity.

TAFT GAINS VOTES IN LATE CONTESTS

Mississippi Falls in Line This Morning With Many Delegates.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Missouri is Lined Up for President This Afternoon on Straight Partisan Issue.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Chicago, June 13.—Contests in the six Mississippi districts, the Second, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh and Eighth, were decided in favor of Taft delegates at the forenoon session of the republican national committee today.

While it is true that this action added twelve votes to the Taft column one of the delegates, Delegate-at-large H. W. Howard of the Eighth district, appeared on both the Taft and Roosevelt delegates under list for instruction.

When question by the members of the convention Mr. Howard was unable to make a definite statement as to which side he was to be on, but his attorneys said he would be on the Roosevelt side.

With the Mississippi contests disposed of the national republican committee took up the Missouri contests involving fourteen seats in the convention. The case of the delegates-at-large were first called.

Twelve delegates were added to the Taft column by the republican national committee in the first two hours of its session today. The six Mississippi districts, the Second, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh and Eighth were decided upon by a viva voce vote.

A demand for roll call was made by the Roosevelt members of the committee, but was ignored. A motion to exclude Francis J. Henry of San Francisco from the republican national committee on the ground that he was a democrat, was made this morning by Committeeman W. S. Sturges of Arizona. The committee refused to exclude Mr. Henry, laying the motion on the table.

The republican national committee convened at 9:10 today to resume consideration of the contests. Twenty-five members were present at the opening.

The five delegates at large for Taft from Missouri were added unanimously by the national committee by a motion made by Senator Penrose this afternoon.

The contest in the second district of Mississippi was the first called. At the suggestion of a committee-man Penrose, attorneys for both sides agreed to consolidate the second, fourth and seventh Mississippi districts. Arguments for the cases taken collectively were then begun.

on the first ballot. Roosevelt managers on the other hand declare their candidate will have the necessary 540 votes to secure the necessary 540 votes to select.

The followers of Senator Cummins in Iowa and Senator La Follette of Wisconsin are expressing opinions that one of these will be chosen on the first ballot.

Senator Elihu Root of New York, choice of the Taft leaders for temporary chairman of the convention was expected to arrive from Washington this afternoon.

It was expected that immediately upon his arrival he would go into conference with Congressman William McKinley head of the Taft Bureau in an effort to devise a plan for temporary organization of the convention.

There was little talk today of opposition to Senator Root selection as temporary chairman.

The Roosevelt men apparently have not agreed on their candidate for the position but declare they will have one when the time comes.

Several conferences of the Taft leaders were held this morning at which the organization of the convention committees were considered.

Former Senator Dix of Ohio, was brought forward as candidate for the chairman of the committee on credentials while Chas. Fairbanks of Indiana is mentioned as a likely candidate for chairman of the committee on resolutions.

The postponement of the Roosevelt national mass meeting was called by Congressman Kent of California and Melville McCormick of Chicago until Monday evening. It was discussed today and several reasons assigned for the change in the plan.

One report suggested that promoters desire to hold off until the last moment in hope that Colonel Roosevelt may decide to come to Chicago and be the principal speaker. Another story was that it deemed advisable to delay the rally until after the national committee had finished hearing of the contests.

Three new charges of attempted bribery in the battle for delegates today were made by Senator Dixon for

D. McKinley.

Colonel Roosevelt. He charged a number of the members of the national committee had been offered U. S. marshalship if they would vote for Taft in the contests under consideration.

STRONG CAST GIVES SENIOR CLASS PLAY

"LITTLE EMILY" IS PRESENTED WITH TRUE APPRECIATION OF SITUATIONS AND CHARACTERS.

PROVES DECIDED HIT

Students Show Marked Dramatic Ability in Production of Charles Dickens' Masterpiece Last Evening.

True appreciation of the dramatic qualities of the piece with clever acting, correct staging and costumes, resulted in a most successful presentation of "Little Emily," a dramatization of Charles Dickens' "David Copperfield," by the graduating class at the high school auditorium last evening.

The cast of characters for this realistic drama of human life, was a strong one and each member performed with grace and ease which came as the result of long weeks of careful study and skillful instruction and training. Mrs. J. H. Day, a past-master at the art of amateur theatrical productions, had entire charge of last night's presentation, and the success of her efforts was keenly appreciated by the audience which filled the auditorium.

The story of "Little Emily" is familiar to nearly every one. It is a masterpiece of human life with its joys and sorrows, with the bright and happy interludes with the gloomy and the sorrowful, in the sympathetic and realistic manner which characterizes all the works of the great English novelist. It is calculated to arouse the best and the noblest of emotions without being too idealistic or pedantic, and as presented by the well balanced cast last night nothing of the beauty of its lessons was lacking.

Miss Sara Garbutt, in the title role of the play, was at once charming and delightful. She appeared on the stage with an ease and naturalness which was engaging and truly portrayed the character of the pretty girl, brought up in the fisherman's cottage by the sea, whose heart torn by two loves succumbed to the more attractive to her innocent soul much to her subsequent sorrow and pain. As she appeared in the first scene Little Emily is most delightful. Her frank and easy manner added to her sweetness and her charm and she is seen to her best advantage. In the later scenes Miss Garbutt acted the part of the heart-broken girl with a truly artistic touch and the pathos and tragedy of the scene where she finally returns to Peggotty's cottage, there only to be confronted by the jealous rage of

About Your Vacation

(By W. C. Kenaga.)

Time to plan it now, and young people especially should plan to make their vacation time worth while. The man or woman who travels sees things, in after life they hear and read more intelligently from having seen different parts of the country.

The best way to plan a vacation is to post up an advertised trips and resorts. Choice may lie between Colorado and Michigan, Atlantic City and Mackinac, or Canada and Wisconsin. The Gazette will be glad to secure and furnish any information desired through their Travel Bureau, concerning any of the many resorts which are advertised in its towns. Plan a vacation which will give you the rest and relaxation you will need, and which will also enable you to gather a knowledge of things new to you.

Steerforth's former sweetheart, Rosa Dartle, was carried out with appreciation for a tense dramatic situation. George Yuhn, as Dan Peggotty, the old sea captain, whose love for Emily amounted to worship, took a very difficult role with ease and carried through the emotional passages where he was fatherly heart of the old fisherman was torn and wrung with sorrow at the absence of his beloved Emily, with rare skill and accuracy. He is seen to advantage, especially in the first scene, and again later on the return of Emily.

The part of Ham, the uncouth yet noble young fisherman whose love for Emily was his only thought, was taken by Robert Cunningham. It was one of the harder parts of the play but was most ably presented. The part of Steerforth, the young nobleman of gentle family, who intervened to cast the shadow of sorrow in the ark by the sea to carry away Emily as his plaything but a few days, was well taken by Stanley Metcalf. Glenn McArthur as David Copperfield, that sympathetic gentleman in the confidence of everyone, who understood the joys and sorrows of all his friends as intimately as a confessor, was well fitted to the role. He acted with calmness and dignity as the part demanded.

One of the best actors of the cast was James Laughlin in the role of Ursh Heep, who had achieved success as he saw it through his humblest means concerning which he never lost an opportunity to proclaim. As the writhing, sneaking, almost-crawling villain, this was a role which demanded careful interpretation and studied acting, and every characteristic was most successfully portrayed by Mr. Laughlin.

Frank Austin as the exuberant Mr. Micawber was one of the most delightful characters of the entire play. The weakness and conceit of this pompous gentleman as well as certain of his good qualities, were well brought out and his presence on the stage was a sure sign for a storm of laughter. The roles of Micawber and his family, Ethel Davis as Mrs. Micawber, and Leah Voltz as Doris Amorphous, the twins, offered practically the entire comedy part of the play. They were equal to the task, however, and the scene where Micawber and wife entertain the friends of their youth was one of the best in the production. Micawber is one of the principals in the undoing of the arch villain, Ursh Heep, and thereby achieved honor and distinction in the eyes of the spectators.

Another comedy character, Miss Betty Trotwood, was well taken by Katherine Carlo. She also was a party to the undoing of the hypocritical Heep, one of whose worst offenses was the ruin, physically and financially, of his partner Mr. Wickfield which part was taken by Leo Ford. Margaret Doty as Agnes Wakefield, did not have so prominent a place but she was charming as David's sweetheart and was one of the more important minor characters.

Ruth Humphrey as Rosa Dartle showed herself an actress of ability and the anger, scorn, jealousy, hate and kindred emotions, which it was her lot to bring out, were most realistic. She bore out the description on the program—"she took everything to a gristlestone, herself, including, sharpened it—on edge tool, always dangerous"—with remarkable accuracy.

Ethel Davis as Martha had a difficult part which she played with feeling and emotion. Allison Burdick as Traddles, Catherine Jones as Peggotty, Markie and Hazel Rice as Mrs. Gumm, all did clever work and added in the success of the entire production.

The action of the piece moved rapidly and the excellence of the entire production made a long play seem short. The synopsis of the scenes and incidents are as follows:

Act I. Scene 1.—The Ark on the Sands. Scene 2.—Visitors from London and Canterbury. Scene 3.—Mr. Micawber's Lodgings; Mr. and Mrs. Micawber Entertain the Friends of their Youth. Scene 4.—Miss Betty Trotwood pursued by Donkeys. Scene 5.—Interior of the Ark. Waiting for Emily.

Act II. Scene 1.—Offices of Wickfield and Heep. Plot and Counter plot. Scene 2.—On the Road to Canterbury. Scene 3.—The Church Yard. The Shadow on the Snow.

Act III. Scene 1.—The Return to the Ark. The beginning of the End. Scene 2.—The Wreck.

Act IV. Scene 1.—Wickfield's Office. Mr. Micawber assists in an Explosion. Scene 2.—The New Life. The Farewell.

GRADUATES PRESENT OPERETTA "SYLVIA"

SENIOR AND JUNIOR CLASS OF TRAINING SCHOOL STAGE PRODUCTION.

ATTENDANCE IS LARGE

Audience Fills Christ Church Guild Hall—Plot And Lines Amusing And Songs Have "Catchy" Melodies.

"Syvia," a pastorial operetta with birth-provoking lines and truthful choruses was presented last night by the Senior and Junior classes of the Rock County Teachers' Training School to an audience that occupied every seat in the Guild Hall of Christ Episcopal Church. The stage decorations, consisting of a mass of green foliage with great bouquets of peonies on either side, forming a fitting and attractive background, and the players' costumes were of beautiful design and color. The class motto, "Labor Conquers," was suspended behind the stage, the letters being in the class colors of old rose and silver.

The plot of the operetta is a simple story of how dissatisfied lovers follow a fleeting fancy for other scenes and sweethearts, to their ultimate disillusionment and return to old attachments. It opens in a hayfield on a summer morning, following a brief prelude where farmer boys and lasses start for their work in the fields with song and chorus. Syvia, a lady of the court and betrothed to De Lacy appears and values her discontent with her lover and his society expressing her longing for the simpler manner of the rustic beau and the peacefulness of country scenes. Betty the country girl engaged to William, wishes to be a court lady and a noble for a lover. The two girls meet, decide to exchange costumes and like-wise sweethearts. They sicken of the change in a day and are ready to return to their old lives.

Miss Florence Nelson's setting in the part of Syvia was very creditable and her singing also very good. Miss Corrine Crandall as Betty showed a good appreciation of the demands of her part, and Miss Rachel Ehringer acted the role of Miss Isabella de Lacy, the court post with all the sentimentality and foolishness that the part demanded. Miss Emma Fosberg made a very droll Prince Tobyttum. The man of consequence who flees from the scene when he hears the howl of a bull. William, "an honest farmer" was well portrayed by Miss Jennie Hangan. Some of the minor parts, those of the farmer's lads, and farmer's daughters, were very well taken. The playing of the accompanist, Mrs. Hyde, who also directed the training of the actors, added much to the appreciation of the operetta, and much credit is also due to the Misses Tilla Jacobson and Miss Ada Buckmaster, who assisted in staging the production.

The program of the play was as follows:

ENORMOUS RUSH FOR VOLUMES

Dictionary Distribution Draws Many. The Stock of Books Replenished, and More Coming.

Coupon clippers are claiming the entire edition of the New Websterian 1912 Dictionary. Illustrated, just as fast as the railroads can deliver the output of the publisher's printing presses to the office of The Gazette. Six coupons clipped from consecutive issues and a small expense bonus turns the trick.

Those who planned the educational opportunity offered in the dictionary distribution are pleased with the ready response and fulfillment received. The better class of people—thinkers who have helped and are helping to make Janesville a synonym for progress—have hourly crowded the Dictionary Department during the past two days. They have nothing but praise for the dictionary and for the newspaper which offered it.

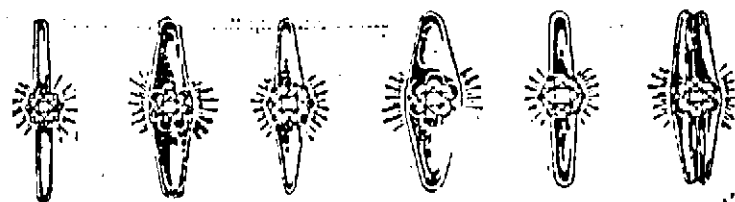

So great is the demand from the more fastidious class of coupon clippers for the beautiful flexible leather bound No. 1 dictionaries that the stock was exhausted. Fortunately a supply had been in reserve and a second distribution of the coveted copies was commenced and the Dictionary Department looked almost like a bargain counter again.

To look and listen during the distribution reminds one of the barker's yell of: "Look, peepit, I want you to notice the heads of those who pass in to see our big show. Notice the heads of those who buy tickets—they have the broad brows of thinkers."

"Look at the people who scoff and sneer and turn away. See, their heads are shaped like coconuts. They lack gray matter. They don't think. They can't grasp an opportunity."

This Dictionary is NOT published by the original publishers of Webster's Dictionary or by their successors. Those who flocked in to get the flexible leather-bound dictionaries told of the efforts being made by jealous book dealers to sell their "Just as good" dictionaries in exchange for coupons and money. Our advice is to peruse the display advertisement on another page of this issue to remember that this is a 1912 edition, fresh from the presses, with all the new words in it, and that any other dictionary of similar size must suffer by comparison, and to realize that the present edition, large as it is, must become exhausted if the present rate of demand keeps up. Lose no time in clipping coupons.

James J. Jim says he'd like to be the lucky manager to have the trio in his string.

Do you know the meaning of the term "pobble hunter," "Roadpaw," "Texan leaguer"? If not, Hugh F. Lorton's definitions which appeared in a recent issue of a popular magazine, will put you wise. Here they are:

"Pobble hunter: A player who makes excuses for making errors. The term arises from the fact that one old time player was caught carrying pobbles in his pocket to drop on the ground after he fumbled, and then find, claiming each time that the ball struck a pobble and bounded wrong."

"Southpaw: A left-handed pitcher. The term is derived from the fact that most baseball grounds are laid out so that the pitcher faces the west, and a left-handed pitcher's arm is to the south."

"Texan leaguer: A short, weak fly that drops just over the infield and too close in for the outfielders to reach it. Usually an accident, but sometimes accomplished purposely by road batters who merely put the ball and float it safe. The term originated from the fact that Ted Sullivan, the veteran player-manager of the Texas league, had a team in the Texas league that was noted for that kind of batting."

Y. M. C. A. TEAM PLAN FOR A STRENUOUS GAME.

Followers of the Y. M. C. A. baseball team are very anxious over the outcome of the game this Saturday between the "Y" and Parker Pen. The association boys are determined to win if there is a possible chance, while on the other hand the Parkers have not lost to any team in the league in the last two years. The game Saturday will be the best thus far this season, and although the attendance has been very small this year they expect a good crowd. The pen makers know themselves that they have not got any easy thing and if they expect to win they will have to go the limit. Green will be on the mound for the "Y" while Brown will do the pitching.

In a collision between the automobile owned by E. T. Brown and a motorcycle belonging to Carl Ploegert at the corner of Glen and Cornelia streets Tuesday evening, the motorcycle was so badly damaged as to be rendered unfit for further use, and the glass of the windshield and one of the front springs on the automobile were cracked. The accident occurred about half past six o'clock. The machines came together at the crossing and Ploegert was thrown against a telephone post when they struck. He was quite badly bruised and his coat and shirt were torn by the sudden impact. In attempting to dodge one another, it is said, the collision of the two machines resulted.

THE SHERMAN LAW.

The Sherman anti-trust law has been the cause of more government law-suits than any statute recorded, and failure to convict is a common experience. The cause of this class of failures was tersely stated the other day by the venerable jurist, Joseph H. Choate, in the case of the government against a Brazilian coffee company.

This company owned ten million dollars worth of coffee, which was stored in American warehouses, and which could not be sold because someone had filed an injunction suit under the Sherman act. Mr. Choate, as counsel for the company, was arguing the case before the United States district court, and created quite a stir among the judges and lawyers when he said:

"Some one indicted this suit whose motives are neither patriotic nor philanthropic, but whose interests will profit by injuring the business of the state of Sao Paulo."

When asked afterward if he meant to intimate that some political interests of Brazil were behind the government's suit he answered he did not mean to convey that impression, but he did believe that certain parties in Brazil were the cause of the suit. He explained that, as in all of the government's suits under the Sherman anti-trust act, the judicial department's attention is attracted by some small interest in the business, who claim they are forced to work under unfair conditions because of the methods of the larger interests.

The government immediately serves up this information in the form of an indictment, the hearing follows, and when the trial has consumed thousands of dollars and months of time, the government finds it was acting on the allegations of an unsuccessful and discontented minority and learns it has not sufficient evidence to get a conviction.

That expresses the weakness of the Sherman law, and it is a vital weakness, because it ignores the only principle which prevails in business, and that is, the survival of the fittest. This may sound like a cold-blooded proposition, but it is true and will continue to prevail so long as business continues to be destitute of sentiment.

The suits brought against the Standard Oil company, the Packers, and a dozen other "big business" interests were instigated by small competitors, who were unable to play the game successfully. The people had no complaint to offer because they had been benefitted and not injured. The suits failed because they had nothing to stand on.

The average man, representing the masses, denounces "trusts and combinations," and patronizes mail order houses, at the expense of his neighbor in business. He clamors for the parcels post, and would continue to clamor if he knew it would cause grass to grow in the streets of the village and country town. Why? Because there is neither sentiment nor sympathy in business.

The principle is universal because human nature is very much alike everywhere. The Sherman law is all right in theory, but like many other good theories, it is impractical. It attempts to be humane, but is so far in advance of the procession that it is lost to sight.

ISSUES OF RIGHT AND WRONG.

The contest for the republican nomination has now narrowed down to a naked issue of right and wrong; for the issue is simply whether or not we shall permit a system of naked fraud, of naked theft from the people, to triumph.

"I have made this contest on two great principles—first, the right of the people to rule, and therefore in the exercise of their deliberate judgment to control their government and their government agents; and, second, their duty so to rule as to bring about not only political but social and industrial justice."

These paragraphs introduced an editorial in the "Outlook" from Colonel Roosevelt. The sentiment expressed indicates that he regards himself as the people's champion, commissioned by himself to make the fight which he is waging in the interests of the two great principles outlined.

Human rights have always been considered sacred on American soil, and the colonel has made no new discovery in finding an excuse for mucking the contest. The trouble with the situation today is, that the social and industrial fabric of the nation is so disturbed, by persistent and long continued agitation, that individual rights are magnified and mutual interests overlooked and forgotten.

There has never been a time in the history of the nation when classes were so arrayed against classes, as they are today, or when so many minds were flattered with the doctrine of socialism. The muckraker and modern reformer have appealed so effectively to ignorance and prejudice that the limited class of people who equip our industries and transportation companies, and furnish employment to a great army of people, are under the ban.

The "social and industrial" justice, to which the colonel appeals, will never be brought about until the rights of this limited class are recognized; as well as the rights of the masses.

So far as the question of political justice is concerned, much depends upon the viewpoint. Successful candidates for office are seldom annoyed by conscientious scruples, and defeated aspirants are so soon forgotten that their complaints fail to attract an audience.

Speaking of justice, the colonel might do well to remember that many fair-minded people find it difficult to understand how he can afford to be a candidate, at the present time, and especially why he should turn against his old friend and abuse him. Political justice is a many-sided proposition, and in passing judgment, much depends on whose ox is gored.

It is interesting to note that the La Follette leaders, in attendance at the preliminary light now going on in Chicago, are not complaining about the steam roller. Mr. Rogers of the national committee claims that the contests have been decided on merit, and that while the national committee possesses unlimited power, that thus far it has not been necessary to use it. The Wisconsin men know something about steam rollers from experience.

It is perfectly natural for people to take sides with the contest now going on in Chicago, and in the heat of discussion to say many bitter things that might better be left unsaid, but it is the same worth the candle? The fight will be over in a few days, and the political atmosphere will clear up. Whatever the verdict may be, it will be accepted by the rank and file, and the country will again be in normal condition.

URGES A RECORD OF VITAL STATISTICS

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., June 12.—In the United States, until very recently, unless a man attain to fame, serve a term in prison or enlist in the army or navy, no permanent record of his existence survives except by accident. This is a deplorable situation when we consider that the three great events in the life of every person, namely, the birth, marriage and death records are of such incalculable value in every relation of life.

This was the statement made by L. W. Hutchcroft, chief statistician for the state board of health, at the first biennial health conference here. He was speaking on the subject of "Why We Register Vital Statistics."

Over one hundred health officers from all sections of the state were present at the morning meeting. Hutchcroft said that a register of the life and family history of cattle, sheep, dogs and cats is kept and carefully preserved so as to increase the money value of these animals. He added that "the human element is the important and vital consideration in all things" and it was strange that "we should be so careless and indifferent about preserving our life and family histories."

By a number of examples continually arising in connection with the state health board, Mr. Hutchcroft illustrated the value of these statistics to the state and individuals. He said that hardly a day passes that some soldier's widow "does not write to our office asking for a certified copy of her marriage record" and in more than fifty percent of the cases no record of the marriage has been recorded. "Some time ago a young Norwegian born and raised in Fremont county fell heir to an estate in a foreign country valued at $50,000," said Mr. Hutchcroft in illustrating the necessity of recording these figures. "In order to obtain a legal title to the property, it was necessary for him to furnish a certified copy of his birth record. This he was unable to do and, moreover, he could not furnish affidavits giving the necessary facts regarding his parentage. As a result he was unable to establish his claim to the property."

Dr. F. E. Bowman of Madison, declared that rabies existed among wild animals as well as among dogs in discussing the best methods for the control of rabies. He said that this fact was unknown until recently and was discovered in England where a man was bitten by a fox.

FINDS JONES OWNER OF CONTESTED LAND

Judge Grimm Finds For Defendant in Case of Peters vs. Jones, Involving Existence of an Alley.

According to the findings of the court in the case of J. W. Peters vs. Fred R. Jones, et al., as submitted by Judge Grimm today, Mr. Jones is the owner of the property claimed by the plaintiff as an alley between the London hotel and the block erected by Mr. Jones during the year 1911. After reviewing the facts of the case as determined from the evidence and the briefs submitted Judge Grimm says as follows in the conclusion of law: "The defendant, Fred R. Jones, is the owner of the whole of the said described tract of land except to the extent to which the same overlaps the land of the adjoining owner of owners, near the southwestern corner thereof, and that if an alley or easement has at any time existed upon the south part thereof the same has become extinguished by operation of law. The defendant is entitled to judgment, dismissing the action with costs."

The action was brought by Mr. Peters to establish the existence of an alley running west from North Bluff street, parallel to East Milwaukee street in the rear of the London hotel and to the property owned by him, known as the American home, by the erection of the three-story stone building on North Bluff street by the defendant in the year 1911. The plaintiff claims that the alley had been closed or so encroached upon as to become useless, damaging the value of the property. The findings of the court stated that the tract occupied by the new Jones' building covers a large part of the alleged alley, leaving a strip not covered six feet wide at Bluff street and extending to a point for the distance of fifty feet. It was also found that the west of the Jones property and built across the alley were the certain wooden buildings or storerooms belonging to the plaintiff's property which had been placed there by the plaintiff's grantors and had blocked the alley for more than twenty-five years. It was also found that the defendant had occupied the alley with buildings and that he had done so in good faith based on written instruments and that such possession and occupation since 1874 had been open, visible, exclusive and hostile to every other claim of title thereto or easement thereon.

REVERSAL TO EARLY STRIKE CONDITIONS

Conditions in Chicago Freight Handlers' Strike Said to Be As Bad As Ever When Strike First Started.

Strike conditions in the strike of the freight handlers in Chicago are said to be practically as bad at the present time as they were when the freight men walked out a month ago, and local business men and merchants in some cases are forced to carry light stocks because of the non-arrival of goods, because of the non-arrival of goods, because of the non-arrival of goods. The cause of the present trouble, it is said, is that many of the men who were employed as strike-breakers when the union men first went out, have quit work and the railroads have been forced to seek again for new men to fill the strikers' places. It is generally understood that those who took the strikers' places were given exceptionally good pay when they first started to work, and in addition received their board and lodging free while the strike was in full progress. Recently, however, it is said, conditions became more settled, and as the new workmen became accustomed to the work the railroads reduced the pay and ceased to furnish board and lodging for the new men. As a result of the reduction, large numbers of the strike-breakers gave up their jobs.

ELEVATION OF TRACK IS HALF COMPLETED

Few More Days Will Suffice to Finish Work—One Thousand Cubic Yards of Material Hauled.

The Northwestern side track on the west bank of the river has been elevated to about half the required distance and a few days more of tamping, filling, and tamping will see the completion of the work. A thousand cubic yards of material have been hauled in. Six teams are at work and haul on the average of 120 loads a day. Yesterday 180 loads, equivalent to about 270 cubic yards were hauled. Gravel and sand is being taken from the Denning property at the corner of Racine street and Garfield avenue where a new sidewalk is to be laid. The teams are nearly through hauling from this place and will then load at the city pit on Wells street.

The portion of the siding that is being elevated is about 1200 feet long and extends from a point opposite the waterworks to the plankline on South Main street. The track is raised a foot at a time. The men who were at work today were all city men, the section men who have been assisting being employed for some other purpose. The crew is as large as can be used to advantage. James Bennett, district foreman of street work for the west side is superintending the work.

HEART AND HOME TALKS

BY BARBARA BOYD

The Graduate's Investments.

The graduate very shortly will make some rather serious investments. She may indeed make them next week, without loss of time from the end of school days. Or she may take a few weeks or months, to rest and catch her breath after final exams and commencement, before she turns her mind to serious things. But sooner or later, she will have to take up this subject of investment.

And the investment she has to make is of her time, her talents, herself—a very important investment, you see, and one that she ought to be most anxious to yield her good profit in the years to come.

The story is told of a prominent New York man, that when he first started in business, he was offered two positions. One was in a banking concern at a not very remunerative salary; the other proffered at the start a much higher salary. But the banking position had a future which the other had not, and he decided to invest for the future. His position today shows the wisdom of his choice.

In the same way, the graduate should look to her future. Social life is all very fascinating for awhile, especially to a young girl. But will the life of a society woman entirely satisfy her?

Stenography may seem an easy and quick road to earning a living. But what about her future as a stenographer? Is it enough? Is she specially fitted physically and temperamentally for stenographic work?

Dressmaking and millinery may not seem remunerative enough right at the beginning. But years hence, as an authority on dress, as a woman who creates the truly beautiful in apparel, would she not be satisfied?

The investment the graduate may make in the next few months requires a long look ahead and a searching look within. She should look to see what she wishes her years to yield. And then her investment should be of this nature. She should look to herself to see what she is best fitted to do, so that her investment shall not be a failure and leave her a bankrupt physically and financially.

Unfortunately, the most important investment of all, that of wifehood and motherhood, a girl cannot choose for herself. This may be the investment she most desires to make, the only one which needs the most conscientious preparation for, and the one which, if she does eventually decide for it, upsets all her other investments. Yet she cannot lift her little finger on the affirmative side. The only power she has in the matter is negative. Since a man chooses his career, and continues it, whether married or not, but a woman must usually alter her whole plan of life if she marries, it is very illogical that the initiative does not rest with her. But at present, it doesn't. The only thing a girl can do, if she changes her plans and marries, is to look to this investment most carefully. It is the most important one she can make. She needs to safeguard it in every way. She needs to study whatever has bearing upon it.

But whatever the decision shall be in the next few months as to the investment the graduate shall make, she should not look upon the matter lightly; but she should gaze with searching, critical eyes into the future years, and see what just investment will prove in the long run most profitable.

Barbara Boyd.

A WOMAN'S OBSERVATIONS

Edna K. Wooley

The Constitutional convention of Ohio, in writing the state constitution, pondered the abolishment of divorce in the state. Some members of the convention argued that marriage will be more sacred in the eyes of the people when they know that once married it means for a life term.

It would mean, in fact, more crime than ever. The marital tie, it is true, is held too lightly. Marriages are lightly

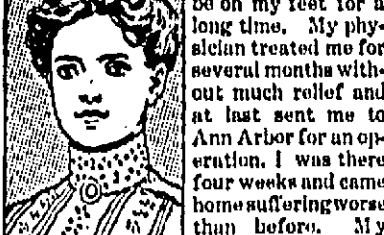

WOMEN, AVOID OPERATIONS

Many Unsuccessful — And Worse Suffering Often Follows. Mrs. Rock's Case A Warning.

The following letter from Mrs. Orville Rock will show how unwise it is for women to submit to the danger of a surgical operation when often it may be avoided by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She was four weeks in the hospital and came home suffering worse than before.

Here is her own statement.

Paw Paw, Mich. — "Two years ago I suffered very severely with a displacement. I could not get on my feet for a long time. My physician treated me for several months without much relief and at last sent me to Ann Arbor for an operation. I was there four weeks and came home suffering worse than before. My mother advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I did. Today I am well and strong and do all my own housework. I owe my health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and advise my friends who are afflicted with any female complaint to try it." — Mrs. ORVILLE ROCK, R. R. No. 3, Paw Paw, Michigan.

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for women's ills, and has restored the health of thousands of suffering women. Why don't you try it?

Berlin's Life in Three Streets. The life of Berlin is concentrated in three streets—the Friedrich Strasse, Liepzig Strasse and Unter den Linden. Beyond these great thoroughfares, ablaze with lights and an immense concourse of people, all is darkness and merry Berlin may be said to begin and end within the limits of these three famous thoroughfares. — National Magazine.

The KITCHEN CABINET

THAT is not that much trouble at my power of place and lordly away. I only pray for simple grace to look my neighbor in the face full honestly from day to day." — J. W. Wiley.

BE SURE TO TRY THESE.

This is a delicious drink, which may be kept over for a year and is much better to give as a tonic than a fermented fruit juice:

Raspberry Shrub.—For every cupful of juice add a half cup of elder vinegar and two cups of sugar. Boil and skim, and when thick bottle. When serving, allow a fourth of a cup of the shrub to three fourths of a cup of cold water, unless the shrub is thin.

Cherry Conserve.—To a pound of raisins add two pounds of cherries, three oranges, juice and rind, and four pounds of sugar. Chop the fruit, add the sugar and cook for a half hour. Seal in glassed white hot.

Salad Dressing for Fruit.—A half cup of orange juice, a fourth of a cup of lemon juice, two tablespoonfuls of butter cooked with two of flour, and a half cup of sugar. Cook until smooth and the flour is well cooked.

Mushroom Catsup.—Wipe, but do not wash, fresh mushrooms. Put in layers in a stone dish, cover with salt and press a plate with a weight over them. Let stand in a warm place for twenty-four hours, then mash and strain them through a sieve. To every quart of the liquor add an ounce of pepper corns and boil for half an hour. Then add a fourth of an ounce of allspice, half an ounce of sliced ginger root, a dozen whole cloves and three blades of mace; cook fifteen minutes. Cool and strain again and put into small bottles. Dip the corks in melted wax.

Beet Relish.—A quart of cabbage, a quart of cooked beets, chopped, two cups of sugar, a tablespoonful of salt, a teaspoonful of pepper and half a teaspoonful of cayenne and a cup of grated horseradish, enough vinegar to mix well, and put into cans cold.

Canned Corn.—To nine cups of corn add a cup of sugar and half a cup of salt and one cup of water. Put into sterilized cans, seal tight. Freshen when using.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

A MOTTO FOR YOU.

"HE WHO gives quickly gives twice."

That sentiment was the motto of one of the finest men in this country. He says that he read it somewhere when he was a child, was immensely impressed by its meaning, promptly adopted it as his motto, and has proved the truth of it over and over again.

When I first read the sentiment, I failed to appreciate its full force, and wondered why he cared for it so much, but somehow the words stayed in my subconscious mind, and the other day they came to the surface again with a new richness of meaning. And the circumstances which brought them there and illumined them were these: A nice little shop girl went out of her way to do me a favor. She held out a coat for me during a special sale until I could find out if it would harmonize with the dress with which I expected to wear it; and when I found out that it most emphatically would not, she was just as kind and courteous as if I had bought it. I thanked her as cordially as I knew how, and then I found her number from one of the other girls, with the intention of sending her a box of candy to prove my gratitude. When I left the shop my first impulse was to go straight to the candy store, but unfortunately something distracted me, and I went home that day without carrying out my intention. The next you must know from experience of your own; the errand not being absolutely imperative, has been put off again and again. I have forgotten the girl's number, and I imagine that by this time she has quite forgotten the whole incident. And all because I did not give quickly.

If I had gone that moment and bought the candy on the strength of my first impulse, I could now be turning my money towards some other giving.

You see—"he who gives quickly gives twice."

And even more true is the converse, "he who gives slowly gives not at all."

Surely you remember that kind note of appreciation which you meant to write. You had especially enjoyed some club of church entertainment, and you thought it would be kind to write and congratulate the committee; you had been wonderfully impressed by some speaker or writer, and you said, "I will tell him so. It may help." But instead of sitting down while you were hot with your kind impulse, and carrying it out at once, you thought, "I'll do it tomorrow."

And of course, tomorrow never came. "Do it now" is a more important motto for kind impulses than for any other business. There is seldom a tomorrow for kind impulses. They are creatures of a day; they are like flowers, as fragile as they are beautiful.

"He who gives quickly gives twice." Will you not make that one of your mottos?

I think, isn't it a man's duty to learn to give?

It certainly looks well to have the head of the family do the giving, but when he makes a mess of it, it is a matter of wisdom for his better half to attend to it. Some men, of course, are too lazy—but what are you going to do with such a man if he hasn't pride enough to come up to the occasion? However, content yourself with the knowledge that in the olden days in good old England, it was etiquette for the mistress to carve for her guests, and a guest who did not receive his portion from the fair hands of the mistress felt himself considerably aggrieved.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have been working out in the garden lately, and am getting very sunburned. Can you tell me what to do to bleach out my face and neck, as they are very dark?

Bathe sunburned parts in butter-milk. Peroxide is a good bleach, too, but too much of it will give the skin a hard dry look. Use cold cream at night wiping off with a soft dry cloth. Dust the face and neck well with rice powder before going out into the sun, and don't be afraid to wear a sun-bonnet. It is not well to get too tanned, though a little of it is becoming to some people.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I always have to carve the meat at our table, even when we have company. My husband says he can't do it. Now, don't you think it's a man's place to carve the meat, Mrs. Thompson? It looks bad to see a woman do it.

In cooking macaroni, do not wash with cold water nor put on to cook in anything but boiling stock or salted boiling water. When it is tender, drain well and proceed with the final and most important touches.

Macaroni Clear Soup.—Break a half-pound of a pound of macaroni into half-inch pieces; cook twenty minutes, drain on a fine sieve. Place in a pan containing two quarts of boiling, clarified, white stock, either veal or chicken. Keep simmering until the macaroni is thoroughly tender. Carefully remove any scum that may rise. Serve grated Parmesan cheese separately.

Spaghetti Croquettes.—Cook half a pound of spaghetti as directed above for macaroni. Drain and cut fine. Mix with a heaping tablespoon of grated cheese and a tablespoonful of thick white sauce. Warm slightly and mix well, then add the yolk of two eggs, beat and spread on a plate to cool. Then form into croquettes and fry in a hot oil.

Macaroni with Corn.—Fill a baking dish with alternate layers of cooked macaroni and canned corn and bits of butter. Pour over a pint of seasoned milk. Bake in a hot oven.

The next is an Italian recipe, and calls for sweet Italian peppers. Stand in a many peppers, fresh, which the seeds and tops have been removed, as you have people to serve, in boiling water for ten minutes. Drain the peppers and fill with cooked, chopped macaroni, mixed with cream sauce well seasoned with cheese, and bake in a granite dish until the peppers are tender. Do not cover. Serve with a tomato sauce. These are very appetizing with boiled or baked fish.

Macaroni with Tomato Sauce.—Put the cooked macaroni in a deep dish and add to it two tablespoonfuls of butter. Have ready a sauce made by cutting a half-can of tomatoes into small pieces, or rubbing through a vegetable press. Add a half cup of broth and pepper and salt. Simmer gently twenty minutes, then add to the macaroni.

Sweetbread with Macaroni.—Layer two also sweetbreads in salted water for fifteen minutes before cooking with a thin onion minced (the onion tender). Then chop very fine, removing all the fibers. Add the hot broth the sweetbreads have been cooked in to a half pound of macaroni-cooked tender. Add two tablespoonfuls of butter, a teaspoonful of parsley, pepper and salt and place in the inner bottle of a double boiler, cover closely and cook twenty minutes.

Macaroni with Cod or other Fish.—Proceed as above, but use cold fish instead of sweetbreads and mix with milk, instead of stock, and bake instead of steam. When almost done sprinkle bread crumbs over the top.

grated cheese and a tablespoonful of thick white sauce. Warm slightly and mix well, then add the yolk of two eggs. Spread on a plate to cool, then form into croquettes and fry in a hot oil.

Macaroni with Corn.—Fill a baking dish with alternate layers of cooked macaroni and canned corn and bits of butter. Pour over a pint of seasoned milk. Bake in a hot oven.

The next is an Italian recipe, and calls for sweet Italian peppers. Stand in a many peppers, fresh, which the seeds and tops have been removed, as you have people to serve, in boiling water for ten minutes. Drain the peppers and fill with cooked, chopped macaroni, mixed with cream sauce well seasoned with cheese, and bake in a granite dish until the peppers are tender. Do not cover. Serve with a tomato sauce. These are very appetizing with boiled or baked fish.

Macaroni with Tomato Sauce.—Put the cooked macaroni in a deep dish and add to it two tablespoonfuls of butter. Have ready a sauce made by cutting a half-can of tomatoes into small pieces, or rubbing through a vegetable press. Add a half cup of broth and pepper and salt. Simmer gently twenty minutes, then add to the macaroni.

Sweetbread with Macaroni.—Layer two also sweetbreads in salted water for fifteen minutes before cooking with a thin onion minced (the onion tender). Then chop very fine, removing all the fibers. Add the hot broth the sweetbreads have been cooked in to a half pound of macaroni-cooked tender. Add two tablespoonfuls of butter, a teaspoonful of parsley, pepper and salt and place in the inner bottle of a double boiler, cover closely and cook twenty minutes.

THE SECRET OF SUCCESS

Genuine Merit Required to Win the People's Confidence.

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real, curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been cured to those who are in need of it.

In an interview with the subject, a prominent local druggist says: "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows immediate results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy that I know of has so large a sale."

"The success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact that it fulfills every wish in overloading kidneys, liver and bladder, cleanses, corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism."

A free trial bottle will be sent by mail, absolutely free. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and mention this paper. Regular size bottles sold at all druggists—50c, and $1.00.

NORWEGIANS EXPECT
A UNION IN CHURCH

Synods Approve Proposed Plan for Unification Which Will Effect All Churches in America.

Rev. O. J. Kvale, pastor of the Norwegian Lutheran church at Oxford, Wis., who has been attending the synod of the church at Minneapolis, reports that the efforts toward a union of the various Norwegian Lutheran bodies in the United States is very bright. A Minneapolis paper treats the matter as follows:

"Prospects are bright for a practical union of all the Norwegian Lutheran churches in America in one great organization with half a million members and 3,000 pastors."

"For thirty years Norwegian Lutherans have been at variance on doctrinal points, which has led to the maintenance of distinct organizations and consequent weakening of effectiveness. The modern tendency toward practical Christianity with less emphasis on minor doctrinal differences has been at work among Norwegian Lutherans, and now promises to bring them together."

"There are two principal organizations, known as the Synod and the United church, with a third somewhat smaller organization called the Hauge Synod. At last year's meetings of the Synod and the United church, committees to discuss union were named. This joint committee, after numerous discussions, unanimously agreed at Madison, Wis., last February, to recommend union to the constituent bodies."

"At the general synod meets only every third year, it was agreed to report to the next synod and to the meeting of the United church at Fargo, Minn., in August."

"Approval is Expected."

"The first of the five district synods, that of Minnesota, meeting at Willmar, has just adjourned after unanimously approving the recommendation of the committee. The eastern district at Iowa, Wis., followed this example. The other three, the synods of Iowa, the Northwest (the Dakotas and Montana), and of the Pacific coast are all to meet between now and the end of July, and it is believed each of them will give approval."

"The United church gathering, now in session at Fargo, has unanimously approved the proposed union. Moreover, the Hauge synod, now in session at Red Wing, has joined the movement of the larger bodies and given its adherence to the principle of union involved. Its negotiations heretofore have been with the United church. Thus, if the three remaining districts of the Synod fall in line as there is every reason to believe they will—the union will have been agreed to. It will then remain to work out the practical details of the union. Each body has a theological seminary—the Synod at St. Paul, Minn.; the United at Minneapolis, Minn.; and the Hauge at Red Wing. Whether these will be united in one seminary or will all be maintained, remains to be determined. There are also a number of colleges maintained by the various bodies. These will naturally cultivate more friendly relations than have heretofore been possible. It is a happy coincidence that the delegates now first officially sent by the church in Norway to bring greetings to the churches here should come at such a time."

President Stub Praised.

"One man largely responsible for the present movement is the Rev. H. G. Stub, president of the Synod, a man of great force of character, tempered by a gentle diplomacy. When James J. Hill offered to give $50,000 to the Decorah seminary, it was Dr. Stub who went out and personally raised $25,000 in contributions from Norwegian-Americans—$25,000 more than Mr. Hill had stipulated."

"This, by the way, puts the Decorah institution on a self-supporting basis. Other powerful factors in bringing about the present situation have been Rev. Dr. T. H. Dahl, president of the United church, and Rev. Dr. J. N. Kildahl, president of St. Olaf's at Northfield. A strong influence, too, has been the coming up of the younger generation with its practical ideas about militant Christianity and its tendency to put less emphasis on merely doctrinal differences."

Place a piece of white blotting paper under a vase containing flowers. It will absorb any moisture which may run down the vase. This prevents stains from appearing upon the polished surface of the table.

Three topographic parties are now working in the Rock river survey, the triangulation and level taking divisions assisting in running contours and noting details. This part of the work demands the most minute observation and the greatest amount of time, hence the concentration of most of the surveying force in that field. The topographic parties are at work between this city and Beloit, and the sounding party is just below Atton. All have their headquarters here. Delay in securing tools and other equipment has prevented them from establishing a camp before this time. The rest of the teams arrived yesterday.

THE TAXPAYER.

By Howard L. Rann.

THE taxpayer is a form of municipal govt., whose object consists mainly of paying certificates and double assessments. He is consulted every once in a while by a total stranger who has been elected assessor on a reform ticket and allowed to contribute a section of his salary to the waterworks fund. The assessor is a confidentially employed individual who assesses everybody alike, except the board of review and a few prominent citizens who double in order to purify the Augean stables. In some of our larger cities the taxpayer has a been pushed back farther and farther into subterfuge, pursued by a s.w.o. assessors and the unrelenting form of the police, until he is so far from his place of business that he has to take a steamer. If he were not for the double and unrelenting taxpayer, this government would have to be put up at auction and sold to the highest and best bidder for cash. Yet who ever hears the taxpayer mentioned in poetry or song? Nobody spills any Fourth of July orations over his prosaic form or hangs an enlarged crayon portrait of him on memory's walls. The tax dodger is a person who has become weary of drawing checks for people with whom he does not mingle socially and conceals a few moneys and credits in a hair trunk. He is a noxious weed, but has a very rank growth in cities, which are about to uncamelize the residence district on the installment plan. If a taxpayer is displeased with his assessment he can either move out of the state or go into a clinic with a first mortgage lien, which is a very painful and satisfactory method. After the taxpayer has floated a few bond issues and maintained the city hall patriots in a state of affluence, there isn't much left for the sinking fund but the tariff. This is the most flourishing form of tax we have and allows a large number of happy and contented people to ride around on rubber tires and unearned increment.

A GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST

"Stop!" commanded Edith Carr. "I told you that it was you I came to see."

"I remember," said Edith Carr. "Mr. Ammon is my betrothed," continued Edith Carr. "I expect to take him back to Chicago with me."

"Then it is untrue that you twice rejected his ring, repeatedly insulted him and publicly renounced him?"

"That was through you!" cried Edith Carr. "I realize the spell of this place for a summer season, I can see just how you have worked to ensnare him!"

"Men would call that lying," said Edith Carr. "The second time I met Philip Ammon, he told me of his engagement to you, and I respected it. When he left me I did not hope or expect to see him again." Edith Carr's voice fell soft and low. "And, behold, you sent him—and free!"

"You exist in that?" cried Edith Carr. "Let me tell you he is not free! If he married you before a month you would read heart-hunger for the in his eyes. He could not love me as he has done and give me up for a little scene like that!"

"You killed his love overhangingly when you disgraced him in public," said Edith Carr. "Killed it so completely he does not even feel resentment toward you."

Edith Carr stood truly regal and filled with scorn. "You are mistaken! Nothing on earth could kill that!" she cried, and Edith Carr saw that the girl really believed what she said.

"You are very sure of yourself?" said Edith Carr.

"I have reason to be sure," answered Edith Carr. "We have lived and loved too long. I have had years with him to match against your days. He is mine! His work, his ambitions, his friends, his place in society are with me. You may have a summer charm for a sick man in the country. If he tried placing you in society you would put him to shame in a week."

"I hardly think I should follow your example up far," said Edith Carr. "I have a feeling for Philip that would prevent my hurting him purposely either in public or private. As for managing a social career for him he never mentioned that he desired such a thing. What he asked of me was that I should be his wife. I understood that to mean that he desired me to keep him a clean house, serve him digestible food, mother his children and give him loving sympathy and tenderness."

"Such vulgarity!" panted Edith Carr. "How can a man like Ammon endure it? You know perfectly that if your puny hold on him were broken, if he were back in his home among his friends and where he was meeting me, in one little week he would be mine again as he always has been."

"That will do!" said Edith Carr. "I shall not act until I know there will be nothing to regret. I have decided on my course. You may return to your friends."

"What do you mean?" demanded Edith Carr.

"That is my affair," replied Edith Carr. "Only this: When your opportunity comes, seize it! Any time you are in Philip Ammon's presence, exert the charms of which you boast and take him. Take him to Onabasha and to Chicago with you. Use every art you possess. If the old charm can be revived I will be the first to wish both of you well. Now, I must return to my guests. Kindly excuse me."

Edith Carr turned and went back to the arbor. Edith Carr followed the fence and passed through the gate into the west woods where she asked Henderson if the car was ready. As she stood near him she whispered, "Take Philip back to Onabasha with us."

"I say, Ammon, can't you go to the city with us and help me find a shop where I can get this plinton fixed?" asked Henderson. "We want to lunch and start back by 5. That will get us home by midnight."

"Philip went into the arbor."

"Edith Carr," he said, "Henderson is in trouble with his automobile. He wants me to go to Onabasha with him to show him where the doctor lives and help him get fixed so he can start back this evening. It will take about two hours. May I go?"

"Of course you must go," she said, laughing lightly. "You can't leave your sister. Why don't you go back to Chicago with them? There is plenty of room, and you could have a fine visit."

"I'll be back in just two hours," said Ammon. "While I am gone you be thinking over what we were talking of when the folks came."

Edith Carr offered her hand to all of them, and when she came to Ammon she gave him one long steady look in the eyes, then shook hands with him also.

When Philip returned to the Limberlost Edith Carr was gone. There was a note for him, saying that even her mother did not know where she had sought refuge. On or before the 1st of September, she wrote, she would let him know where she was and her decision. Philip, deeply disappointed, returned to Chicago. There Edith Carr, in a meeting at which Philip's father was present, begged his forgiveness, told him she had always loved him and asked for his love again. But he told her any love he had ever had for her was dead. He was going back to the Limberlost, she said.

Edith Carr, feeling the need of rest, went to the summer home of the Angel and Brockles, on Mackinac Island, and received a warm welcome from Mr. and Mrs. O'More and their four young children.

CHAPTER XXV.

Wherein Edith Carr Wages a Battle and Hart Henderson Stands Guard.

MANY people looked, a few followed, as Edith Carr slowly came down the main street of Mackinac, pausing here and there to note the glow of color in one small booth after another, overflowing with curios. Despite the effort she made to move lightly she was very tired and dragged her heavy feet with an effort.

She turned at the little street leading down to the dock and went out to meet the big lake steamer ploughing up the straits from Chicago. Past the landing place, on to the very end of the pier she went, then sat down, leaning against a dock support and closed her tired eyes. When the steamer came very near she languidly watched the people lining the railing. Instantly she marked one lean, anxious face turned toward hers and with a throb of pity she lifted a hand and waved to Hart Henderson. He was the first man off the boat.

"Did you have a successful trip?" she asked.

"I accomplished my purpose. Edith, I saw some one today in the Lake Shore private hospital."

"An accident?"

"No. Nervous and physical breakdown."

"Phil said he was going back to the Limberlost."

"He went. He was there three weeks, but the strain broke him. He has an old letter in his hands that he has handed until it is ragged. He held it up to me and said, 'You can see for yourself that she says she will be well and happy, but we can't know until we see her again, and that may never be. She may have gone too near that place her father went down, some of that Limberlost gang may have found her in the forest. She may be dead in some city morgue this instant waiting for me to find her body.'"

"Hart, for pity's sake stop!"

"I can't," cried Henderson desperately. "I am forced to tell you. They are fighting brain fever. He did go back to the swamp and he provided it night and day. The days down there are hot and cold, and the nights wet with dew and cold. He paid no attention and forgot his food. A fever started, and his uncle brought him home. They've never had a word from her or found a trace of her. Mrs. Comstock thought she had gone to O'More's at Grand Rapids, so when Phil got sick she telegraphed there. They had been gone all summer, so her mother is as anxious as Phil."

"The O'Mores are here," said Edith. "I haven't seen any of them, because I haven't gone out much in the few days since we came, but this is their summer home."

"Edith, they say at the hospital that it will take careful nursing to save Phil. He says he will stay there just two days longer. The doctors say he will kill himself when he goes. He is a sick man, Edith. His hands are burning and shaky and his breath was hot against my face."

"Why are you telling me?" It was a cry of acute anguish.

"He thinks you know where she is."

"I do not! I haven't an idea!"

"He said it was something you said to her that made her go."

"That may be, but it doesn't prove that I know where she went."

Henderson looked across the water and suffered keenly. At last he turned to Edith and told a firm, strong hand over hers.

"Edith," he said, "do you realize how serious this is?"

"I suppose I do."

"Do you want as fine a fellow as Phil driven any further? If he leaves that hospital now and goes out to the exposure and anxiety of a search for her there will be a tragedy that no after regrets can avert. Edith, what did you say to Mrs. Comstock that made her run away from Phil?"

"I told her Phil was mine! That if he were away from her an hour and back in my presence he would be to me as he always had been."

"Edith, do you believe that now?"

The beautiful head barely moved in negation. Henderson gathered both her hands in one of his and stretched an arm across her shoulders to the post to support her. She dragged her hands from him and twisted them together.

"Not I do not believe it now! I know it is not true! I killed his love for me. It is dead and gone forever. Nothing will revive it—nothing in all this world!"

She dropped back against his arm exhausted. Henderson held her and learned what suffering truly means. He fanned her with his hat, rubbed her cold hands and murmured broken, incoherent things. By and by great slow tears slipped from under her closed lids, but when she opened them her eyes were dull and hard.

Henderson thrust his handkerchief into her fingers and whispered, "Edith, the boat has been creeping up. It's very near. Maybe some of our crowd are on it. Hadn't we better get away from here before it lands?"

"If I can walk," she said, "Oh, I am so dead tired, Hart!"

"Yes, dear," said Henderson soothingly. "Just try to get past the landing before the boat anchors. If I only dared carry you!"

"They struggled through the waiting masses, but directly opposite the landing there was a backward movement in the happy, laughing crowd, the gang plank came down with a slam and people began hurrying from the boat. Crowded against the fish house on the dock Henderson could only advance a few steps at a time. He was straining every nerve to protect and assist Edith.

Henderson shot a swift glance toward the boat. Terence O'More just had stepped from the gangplank, escorting a little daughter, so like him, it was comical. There followed a picture not easy to describe. The Angel in the full flower of her beauty, richly dressed, a laugh on her crimson face, the setting sun glinting on her gold hair, escorted by her eldest son, who held her hand lightly and carefully watched her steps. Next came Edith, dressed with equal richness, a trifle taller and slenderer, almost the same type of coloring, but with different eyes and hair, facial lines and expression.

As the crowd pressed around the party an opening was left beside the fish sheds. Edith ran down the dock. Henderson sprang after her, catching her arm and assisting her to the street. "Help me!" she cried, clinging to him. He put his arm around her, almost carrying her out of sight into a little cove walled by high rocks at the back, where there was a clean floor of white sand, and logs washed from the lake for seats. He found one of these with a back rest, and hurrying down to the water he soaked his handkerchief and carried it to her. She passed it across her lips, over her eyes.

"Hart, what makes you?" she said wearily. "My mother doesn't care. She says this is good for me. Do you think this is good for me, Hart?"

"Edith, you know I would give my life if I could save you this," he said, and could not speak further. He held her carefully, softly fanning her. She was suffering almost more than either of them could bear.

"I wish your boat was here," she said at last. "I want to sail fast with the wind in my face."

"There is no wind. I can get my motor around in a few minutes."

"Then get it."

"On the sand. I can phone from the first booth. It won't take but a little while."

DINNER STORIES

The Meadow Mall contained at last one really exciting piece of news last week.

Smith's, my dear! It seems that new maid of theirs threw some gunpowder on the fire by mistake and was blown through the roof. Poor girl!"

Mrs. Brown looked up dreamily from her book.

"Poor Mrs. Smith, you mean, Jim," she said, "that's the fourth maid this year who has left her without giving notice!"

"Patrick, the widow Muloney tells me that you stole one of her finest pigs, is it correct?"

"Yes, your reverence."

"What have you done with it?"

"Killed it and ate it, your reverence."

"Oh, Patrick, Patrick! When you are brought face to face with the widow and the pig, on the great judgement day, what account will you be able to give of yourself when the widow accuses you of stealing?"

"Did you say the pig would be there, your reverence?"

"To be sure, I did."

"Well then, your reverence, I'd say, 'Mrs. Muloney, there's your pig.'"

The dust-begrimed tramp saw the good lady of the house pottering about in the garden; so he approached her on the subject of alms. "And where have you been, and how do you live?" she asked.

"Well, ma'am, I've been all over the world—Europe, Asia, Africa, America; and have had a most varied experience in the course of the eleven months."

"Then, my man, you should have an interesting story to tell."

"Quite right, ma'am, but I am essentially an after-dinner speaker."

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Gazette, June 13, 1872.—Another Party: The residence of Edward McKee, on Main street in this city, was the scene of another brilliant party last evening. Last week the oldest members of the family gave a social entertainment, and the occasion was duly honored by a brilliant company. This affair, however, belonged exclusively to the young members of the family, Miss Lillian McKee and Edward McKee, Jr. A very large company assembled and a most attractive and enjoyable feast was not ever been presented in this city than this. Dancing and other social exercises were continued until a late hour.

On these timbers Murphy lodged his framing, and went through and struck the timbers of the second story floor, twelve or fifteen feet below. The former engaged with severe bruises, but the latter struck on his abdomen and ribs, producing a injury similar to that of John Leigler. Their injuries, however, are not so serious as was at first supposed. Both of them will be ready for duty again soon.

We burden ourselves with glancing with glancing neighbors may stop and stare; but the beautiful things are the glances of stars that the rightness wear. There are beautiful things in the poor man's cot, though empty the hearth and cold, if love and service are in each thought that husband and wife may hold. There are beautiful things in the lowest slum where wandering outcasts grope, when down to its depths they see you come with message of help and hope. The beautiful things that we mortals buy and dash in the crowded street, will all be junk when we come to die, and march to the judgment seat. When everything's weighed on that fateful day, the lightest thing will be gold. There are beautiful things within reach today, but they are not bought or sold.
